3. TEACHING NOTES

Teaching notes for the course online:

- The students are probably not accustomed to working with written instructions; therefore, it is very important that you help them to be confident that they can do a good job on the activity. To this end, it is recommended that you invite the students to do the following:
 - a) Summarize the explanation of the topic.
 - b) Watch the videos listed in the topic so that they can visualize these historical periods and describe them in their own words.
 - c) Place the required events (scenarios) in chronological order.
 - d) Identify key persons and ordinary people.
 - e) Use your own words to write the dialogues. Base the conversations not only on historical events but also on your imagination of how people acted and felt during these times in history.
 - f) Remind them to complete the exercise number 3 for gain the right to turn in for the module evidence.

3. TEACHING NOTES

Teaching notes for the course online:

- Write examples of colonies in Africa, Asia, or Oceania in the forum.
- In the forum, add quotations from historians or humanists that show how despicable it is to mistreat human beings.
- Point out to your students that the comparative table shows some of the most basic aspects of life but they can extend it to include other factors.
- Indicate that the purpose of the tables is to aid analysis, so the descriptions requested should be as complete as possible.
- Remind your students that the proposal they will submit at the end of the activity is an exercise in reflection that will help them to understand what is required of them for the module evidence.
- Remind them to complete the exercise number 9 for gain the right to turn in for the module evidence.
